Biographical/Historical note

Mary Owings Miller was born in Columbia, South Carolina on September 26, 1900. The exact date of her death is not known. She received her Bachelors Degree from Winthrop College in 1921, a Teaching Certificate in 1925, and her Master of Arts degree in 1931. She married Raymond B. Miller, a professor of Economics at the University of Baltimore, in 1927. In 1941, while living in Baltimore, Maryland, Mary Owings Miller began editing and publishing Contemporary Poetry, a bi-annual collection of poetry by various authors. She changed the publishing schedule for Contemporary Poetry to one volume per year in 1959 and continued to publish that title until 1970. In addition to the annual work of poetry that she published, Miller also published a Distinguished Poet Series and a Library Series. These series were published intermittently and featured such poets as Richard Hart, John George, Merrill Moore, and Miller's own poetry. Some of her works include Wheel of Paper (1948) and High Sun Over Yram (1961).

Scope and Contents

The collection consists primarily of correspondence and business letters written to Contemporary Poetry and Miller as an editor or publisher. The envelopes for the letters were heavily annotated by Miller and have been kept with the letters. She arranged all of her correspondence in alphabetical order and bundled the groups of letters together and labeled them with the appropriate letter of the alphabet. Original order was maintained while processing the collection and even though some of the authors of the letters do not have surnames, they were left in place as Miller had left them. Additionally, the letters were already roughly arranged in chronological order within each bundle.
