LETTER FROM THE CEO

Lots of great changes have come to the Enoch Pratt Free Library this fall. One big change is happening right here, in Compass. We’ve moved to a magazine format, rather than a list of programs. When we increased library hours a few years ago, we also increased our program offerings. At that point, we could no longer fit all our programs into Compass. It’s a great problem to have! This new redesign allows us to provide more context about our programs and services. You’ll see Q&A’s with authors, articles, spotlights on different services, and more. Rest assured, the Pratt Library is doing more programming than ever. A full list of programs is always available on our website and flyers are out in the different branches.

Some other big changes you’ll see this year include a brand new speaker series! The Hackerman Foundation Best & Next Speaker Series debuts in a big way with Oscar-winner Spike Lee on December 3. The series will bring thought leaders and innovators to Baltimore for free public programs. We’ve also got some big names coming to the Brown Lecture series and Pratt Writers LIVE! including Colson Whitehead and Rick Atkinson. You don’t want to miss it.

We’re also happy to launch the second year of One Book Baltimore. The initiative is a collaboration between the Pratt Library, Baltimore City Schools, the T. Rowe Price Foundation, and other community partners to connect 7th and 8th graders, their families, and the community by reading the same book. This year’s selection is Long Way Down by Jason Reynolds. The book plunges head first into some heartbreaking issues facing many teens in our community today. I hope it sparks conversations in libraries, in schools, and around dinner tables in Baltimore City.

When bad things happen
we can usually look up and see the moon, big and bright, shining over us.

That always made me feel better.
Like there’s something up there beaming down on us in the dark.

Jason Reynolds, Long Way Down

Undesign the Redline

NOVEMBER 1 – JANUARY 31, ALL DAY
“Undesign the Redline” is a framework for unearthing our most deep, systemic, and entangled crises. This interactive exhibit, workshop series, and curriculum explores the history of structural racism and classism, how these designs compounded each other from 1938 Redlining maps until today, and how we can come together to undesign these systems with intentionality.

CONVERSATION:
Crossing the Lines Between Us with author Lawrence Lanahan
Central Library, Wheeler Auditorium
Wednesday, November 20, 6:30 p.m.
LAWRENCE LANAHAN is the author of The Lines Between Us: Two Families and a Quest to Cross Baltimore’s Racial Divide. In his deeply reported, revelatory story, Lanahan chronicles how the Baltimore region became so highly segregated and why its fault lines persist today.

With over one billion people on the move, migration is a global reality. The numbers of people fleeing their countries for fear of persecution and insecurity are at their highest levels ever recorded. This large-scale movement has bred suspicion, misconceptions, and anti-migrant/anti-refugee sentiment in the US and abroad. It is time for all of us to hear refugees’ and migrants’ stories in their own words as well as from the Hopkins faculty who work with them.

FULL EVENT CALENDAR AT PRATTLIBRARY.ORG
On September 14, our historic Central Library celebrated its Grand Reopening to commemorate an incredible renovation. Thousands of people came through the front doors, and the day was an out and out success.

One corner of the library that never stopped teeming with people was the brand new Earl Center for Teen Learning and Leadership. In addition to the beautifully restored main room, visitors discovered our state-of-the-art maker space, which boasts 3D printers, a recording studio, gaming consoles, sewing machines, and much more.

In short, it’s a really, really cool space to spend your time — and we would know! On October 14, the entire Pratt family participated in a staff development day, and once again, the Teen Center stole the show.

During the Grand Reopening, one of our customers, Rose, was so taken with the available technology that she and her dad returned a week later with some unbelievable design files for a complete chess set containing 12 unique pieces. All told, the project took a total of about 30 hours to print, and we are thrilled with the result.

We like to say here at the Pratt that your journey starts here — whether it’s a new book, an old movie, or a cutting-edge piece of equipment, we’re always looking for the next free resources to provide the City of Baltimore.
Q&A with Jason Reynolds

What was your reaction when you heard Long Way Down is the 2019 One Book Baltimore selection?
Pure gratitude. At the end of the day, no one has to care about anything I've made. So for this book to be chosen as Baltimore's One Book is nothing short of an honor.

What do you hope Baltimore city students get out of the book?
Love. Beyond being put in a position to think critically about environment and the complicated decisions they often have to make, beyond the conversation around gun violence and its effects on our communities, I hope they feel like someone understands. Someone loves them.

How do you feel the shared experience of reading the same book can help bring a community together?
It can spark discourse, and to me, what's needed more than anything right now, is an honest conversation, not just around the issue at hand, but around ALL the macro inequities that cause the issue at hand.
